Our step-by-step guide with tips on giving a successful interview

What's next?

You have just received the life-changing news that your O1-A visa application has been approved! Congratulations—this a massive accomplishment.

Schedule your visa appointment

One final task will unlock your journey: schedule your visa appointment, which will include fingerprinting, photographs, and an interview. This appointment, conducted at U.S. embassies and consulates worldwide, is your last step in demonstrating your eligibility for the O1-A Visa criteria.

Here, we'll show you how to book your visa appointment without stress.

Prepare for your Visa Appointment

Preparation is the most important part of a successful visa appointment. The scheduling process may vary slightly depending on where you currently live, but these steps outline the general process.

Gather your documents

Collect printed copies, not originals, of all the necessary documents and consolidate them into a folder:

<input type="checkbox"/> VALID PASSPORT No need to bring any of your expired passports.	<input type="checkbox"/> VISA APPROVAL NOTICE Form 1-797
<input type="checkbox"/> DS-160 CONFIRMATION PAGE You will secure this when you make your appointment.	<input type="checkbox"/> PASSPORT PHOTOS Taken within the last 6 months.
<input type="checkbox"/> ANY ADDITIONAL DOCUMENTS As requested by the U.S. embassy or consulate

You may also benefit from bringing along a second folder of extra materials—see Interview Tip #4.

Make the appointment online

- ☐ Visit the Official U.S. Visa Information and Appointment Services webpage for your country.

Most countries have an official US Consulate website with its own webpage for visa appointment scheduling that ends in .usembassy.gov. Find yours here.

For example, if you're applying in Australia, visit the U.S. Visa Information and Appointment Services website for Australia.

- ☐ Create or log into your account and confirm your profile.

Create an account or log in if you have an existing one.

Double-check every input that you've provided accurate contact and profile information since this will be used for all communications regarding your appointment. You don't want to miss important communications because you misspelled your email address.

- ☐ Complete the DS-160 Form and print it.

If you haven't already, fill out the DS-160 form, save the confirmation page, and print it. This form gathers your personal information and trip details to the USA. Information from this completed form will be required during the appointment scheduling process.

- ☐ Pay your visa application fee.

Complete payment for the visa application fee through your account. Keep the payment receipt for scheduling and as proof for your interview.

Schedule your appointment

Follow the instructions on the website to schedule your visa appointment. You'll need to enter the barcode from your DS-160 confirmation page and the receipt number from your fee payment.

Select the U.S. embassy or consulate where you want to have your interview, choose a date and time that works for you, and confirm your appointment.

Tips for a successful interview

At your visa appointment, you be required to present your documents and respond to questions regarding your O1-A Visa application. Here are some tips for crushing the interview.

-  Dress professionally. This makes a good impression while helping the consular officer visualize your professionalism and respect for the process,.
-  Arrive an hour early. Arriving late can negatively impact your interview outcome, so an hour in advance of your appointment time gives you wiggle room for traffic, public transit mishaps, or other events that could stand in the way of making it on time.
-  Review your own information while you wait. Before the interview, revisit your visa application and the information provided in your DS-160 form. Being familiar with all the details of your application can help you answer questions confidently.
-  Be transparent. Provide an honest and direct answer to each of the consular officer's questions. This means that if you're unsure about something, it's totally fine to admit it.
-  Equip yourself with evidence. If you have additional documents such as letters of recommendation, awards, or publications, bring copies of them along in a second folder to strengthen your application.
-  Prepare for questions. By practicing with the example questions included here, you can be ready for questions about your qualifications and the significance of your work to your field. This is the time to showcase how and why you go above and beyond in your industry—and why you deserve a chance to showcase your skills in the United States.
-  Keep calm and be kind. Projecting confidence can be difficult if you're not feeling confident, but acting and speaking kindly can help you appear calm and composed, professional, and emotionally intelligent during your interview. Good rapport may make your interviewer more inclined to offer constructive feedback if your candidacy is unsuccessful, but your kindness should always be sincere.

After your visa appointment

Following your interview, the consular officer will provide you with the outcome. If your visa is approved, congratulations! You'll receive a visa stamp on your passport, granting you legal entry to the United States.

If, however, your visa application is denied, don't lose hope! Keep in mind that many applicants make multiple attempts to secure the O-1A Visa, and the best thing you can do is learn how you can strengthen your case for future attempts: Politely ask about the reason for the denial and, where possible, address the issues before reapplying.
